WEDDINGS AND OTHER SOCIAL EVENTS

THE illuminated address presented to His Excellency Governor General by his visit to Wabashaw on Friday last, was the work of an Edmonton young lady—Miss Mary McDaniel, a student at the University of the Separate School teachers. It was beautifully done in early English style, in black and gold lettering, with the signature of the Governor-General on the top and the border of Canadian maple leaves and other decorations.

Mr. Alex. McLean, representing Alberta L. O. O. F. at Sovereign Grand Lodge, being held in Detroit.

Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Weller, entrepreneurs of the Weller's, and Mr. and Mrs. M. and M. H. Hourtin and M. Gabriel Louis Jarry, the French violinists, who recently took part in the

His Worship the Mayor and Mrs. McLean entertained at dinner in the Mayors' Room at the Hotel Macdonald when ten French residents of the city were invited to meet M. Gabriel Louis Jarry and his wife and their son, an accomplished musician, who learned his bearings in the drawing room after a performance of his own guests were Judge and Mrs. Donaldson, Mr. and Mrs. McLean, Mr. and Mrs. E. Fair, Mr. and Mrs. G. Cox, Consul and Mme. Jenkinson. The dinner was a success, and the establishing desirable social relations between the Canadian and French residents of Jasper was the chief after-dinner speech in which he emphasized the importance of the desirability of developing an understanding in Canada. Judge Dubois and M. Groulx also spoke.

M. Gabriel Louis Jarry, of the French consulate service and M. Hourtin, eminent French educationalist, accompanied by Madame Hourtin, were on their way to the city en route from Victoria, where they performed at Frampton Hall on Saturday evening. A short, but interesting after-dinner speech in which he emphasized the importance of the desirability of developing an understanding in Canada. Judge Dubois and M. Groulx also spoke.

THE SONNET
Some hands, dusted long ago have played.
The sonnet: am I hair afraid
So some ancient jar keeps re-
With dust of roses that blun-
So the poet's sweetness pos-
With the great ones, we want
We want.

In all old Petarch made his lover's mouth:
With his hands made a form of
his own:
And the wordsworth, and the Keats.
Are of the dead that live in its
When to a sonnet I put a bumble against the great earth.

A Lesson in Wheat Marketing

The price of wheat jumped five cents a bushel on Monday. War prospects changed a decline to a rising market. On through last week the market was for indefinitely lower prices. This week the prospect is for indefinitely higher prices. The startling change, and its cause, should convince even H. W. Wood that wheat prices are fixed by influences and causes from without and not from within Canada.

A New Triple Alliance?

Germany has flatly refused to post the 100 million gold marks which were demanded by Belgium as a guarantee of payment of 270 million of treasury notes which Belgium was asked to accept, payable in six, twelve and eighteen months. The reparations commission has thrown up its hands and told the Allies that it must now make its own arrangements if they know how. What is to happen next nobody pretends to know. Paris reports that the Belgian representatives on the commission were prepared to hold out that same treasury note until it demanded the gold. The assumption seems to have been that this was a diplomatic joke, only to be played as a last resort and then quietly withdrawn if Germany refused. But Belgium has not withdrawn the demand. And now France announces that it is backing Belgium.

As a result the Allies seem to think that they did a much ago, and are now going to go back and consider what to do about it, while Germany keeps its mouth. With the difference that Belgium, formerly neutral, now stands with France in demanding that Germany be made to pay, while Britain, so far as alone in a world inings to take Germany's war guilt that it can't pay now but will pay some time.

As a side-light on the situation, the French budget shows a deficit of 13,600,000,000 francs. The billions of this went into the reconstruction of the devastated region where the fighting took place, and France was counting on payments from Germany to help it out. As Germany has not paid this tax-payer will have to. That should off set the propaganda, that has been so freely peddled in recent months, that France is not only a victim of reparations, because it wanted to be. While it is down, France may be more or less Chauvinistic, but in the matter of reparations it is not a free agent. Money has to be used to speed up the reconstruction of ruined towns and cities, and it cannot be spent unless somebody pays it. That is the hard fact that faces France. There is no wizardry by which the ravages of war can be undone. Reconstruction means money, and money means taxes—taxes on German tax-payers or on French tax-payers. If Germany refuses to pay, or continues to stand off a settlement indefinitely, France must compel its own citizens to produce the money.

Meantime, as far as by a member of the German delegation in Paris is worth noting. He said, perhaps in sarcasm, that the Allies "always decide to use stern measures" to collect, but that Germany would continue to refuse to put up the gold. He added, "I think some compromise will be effected, as the Allies do not want to precipitate trouble at this time."

Why "at this time"? Is there a connection between Germany's flat refusal to hand over the gold and the victory of the Turks in Asia Minor? Where did Kemal get his ample equipment and munitions if not from Germany or Russia? And did he strike at this particular moment in the double sense of accomplishing his own ends and of giving the Allies trouble elsewhere to keep them from applying measures of enforcement against Germany?

It is not clear. But it is evident. Soviet Russia was in alliance with the Germans at the time and have never quarreled so far as is known; that the Soviet Government has been hand and hand with the Kemalists for two years; and that Germany and Soviet Russia were in alliance while the Genoa conference was sitting. It is just possible that the Allies without knowing it are facing a new line-up, of Germany, Russia and Turkey; while the United States was debating what it would do in each of these six as separate states, Berlin, Moscow and Ankara have closed the gaps in the triple alliance that has long been in prospect and are now prepared to present a united front from their divided opponents.

A Builder Gone.

The death of R. B. Angus removes another of the giants who built the first transcontinental railway across Canada. Lord Strathcona, his friend, said: "He was a builder who had already gone. Those Scotch boys left early a monument that will perpetuate their memory.

Wood Versus Wood.

Mr. W. Wood says it would be a misfortune if any Western province should have to proclaim a moratorium in order to protect the farmers against their creditors. He is right in that. And being right now proves that he was right when he told the Parliamentary committee last spring that Western agriculture was bankrupt. If the farmers were really in a moratorium, it would be no misfortune. It would be very decidedly the loss of two evils. A moratorium now would do damage because it would ruin the farmer's credit, and while a man has credit he is not "broke,"

Bootless Kick.

Interest in Alberta's fifty-dollar-per-day legislation continues to spread, at home and abroad. U.S.A. locals are still demanding rebates or resignations; and doing all manner of things to the U.S. diplomats for a bill that will not be introduced alone in a world inings to take Germany's war guilt that it can't pay now but will pay some time.

think the absence of the omnibus "bug" cheapens the cost of production. Potato growing is an established branch of farming in this district, and is said to be reasonably well developed. The potato has become a more important item in the production program as Western cities grow and the industrial population increases.
